In submitting this report we would remark that we have not accomplished all we would have desired. Perhaps we have done all public sentiment demanded except a small job of mason work in the cemetery on the hill. Small jobs are apt to be put off on the plan "that they can be done any time." Your committee are sorry it was neglected until too late in the season to do the work. We think that Mr. P. S. Call, sexton of the cemeteries on the plain, has given general satisfaction. He has kept every part neat and made the cemeteries to reflect credit upon the town. The sexton has taken personal interest in the care and has suggested many improvements.

We think seeding down the west side will be a great improvement to the general appearance of the cemetery. The sexton was ordered to dig up all the bushes in the new cemetery. If bushes are only cut off they keep sprouting and the stumps are unsightly; it costs more at first but in the end it is economy.

We would have been glad to have commenced some system of grading a given amount of the paths and avenues so that in a few years all avenues and paths would be in a condition that a very little labor would keep them all free from grass and weeds.

There are many improvements which might be made. The most needed are curb-stones at the corners of all avenues where carriages are apt to mar any lot and shade trees set by the road side. Your committee feel cautious about spending much money, until those who have friends and connections buried in these cemeteries and are expecting to be laid there themselves, manifest a more decided interest in the care and improvement.

It does seem that those who are expecting to spend the remainder of their lives in this town, and to be buried in one of these cemeteries, would select a lot and put it in order somewhat, and not wait until the stern messenger, Death, calls on them to do it. If those who should be particularly interested, would take hold in earnest for one year, the fund might be increased to one thousand dollars, the interest of which would supply all needed attention to the lots, so that returning friends would feel that the town had not betrayed their trust.

Hoping our successors will do more for the improvement of cemeteries, we respectfully submit this report.

HORACE BERRY,

WM. C. HARRIS,

The year past has been one of prosperity to Nesmith Library. More books have been taken from the library and read than usual. The librarian has been alert to his duties. Books presented to the library are as follows: Mexico and Mexicans, presented by B. E. Blanchard, Esq.; Glints from over the Water, presented by Hon. P. B. Cogswell, of Concord; Reports from N. H., from State Departments; also pamphlets from several U. S. Departments.

The fact that so many volumes are read by the inhabitants of our town, and summer visitors coming here annually, shows that the library is warmly appreciated. The character of the book should be known before placing them upon our library shelves. A good book is a great power to elevate, instruct and bless the reader, while a bad book is more to be feared than infectious diseases. A bad book is the criminal's guide book leading him astray from virtue and teaches him to break the laws of man and the commands of God.

I call your attention to the evident truth that a general and complete catalogue of books in Nesmith library is needed. The cost of the first catalogue was $137.25 for an edition of 350 copies. A new and thoroughly revised edition should soon be printed, including all the printed supplements and the manuscript one now used by the librarian.

Fellow citizens, allow me also to say, there is not much space left in the room assigned for Nesmith library to place more books. I deem it wise to speak of this now that you may be considering what is best to do in the near future. I advise that a new and commodious library building be erected, having a capacity likewise for a reading room, where people can resort to read, and use the reference books of the library. It would not seem best to take more of the town hall; and after marring the hall, still have the same high shelves and inconvenient room for our library. Hence I urge that you give this matter due consideration. There is an opportunity for any man of wealth to erect this building and present it to the town, and thus raise his name high on the scroll of fame!

Respectfully submitted,

JOSEPH S. COGSWELL,

For Trustees.

REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE,

FOR THE YEAR ENDING MARCH 1, 1886.

Your committee in endeavoring to perform the duties assigned, would present the following report.

The different terms of school have presented a varied degree of progress, corresponding to the amount of interest enlisted on the part of scholars, and unity of action with the parents that compose the several districts in sustaining the teachers in good discipline and wholesome order; for without order, there can be no good advancement: scholars become idle, inattentive and uneasy; which soon destroys any school. But where the parents have a proper watch-care, the scholars are soon seen at home with a book looking up the lesson for the next day; studious at school, paying good attention to their own matters and allowing others to do the same.

Teachers are encouraged to do faithful work and do not tire as those who work against wind and tide; the result is a pleasant, orderly school; teacher and scholars are alike interested, and very good advancement is made throughout the entire term. And right here let it be said to the credit of the faithful ones; that we have had the pleasure of noting some remarkably fine terms the past year; would we could say this of all the schools; but lack of co-operation, and short-sighted selfishness is becoming destructive in too many instances: time wasted, money squandered, petty quarrels engendered and what is worse, youthful minds injured and soured for life; fellow townsmen, is it not time to stop and consider? As we are too slow to realize that our children are very soon to occupy the positions of trust in our country; consequently the first thing for them to learn is respect for law and order.

We are called a "Nation of ill manners," and have we not justly earned the title? When the child is taught at home to disobey wholesome rules at school, and if he gets punished, why the boy is not faulty, but the teacher is wrong: like the mother, who when her son was sentenced to State Prison for theft, declared her son was all right, but the law was at fault.

When the parent tells the boy he need not obey the teacher's rules; surely that parent is preparing the child to be a disgrace to himself, to his parents and a troublesome member of the community in which he lives.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

For the years '83 and '84, the town very generously supplied books for the pupils without charge, which served a very good purpose, viz: putting into the hands of every scholar the proper book for him to study, without borrowing of his neighbor; or two studying from the same book, a very serious draw-back in many schools: it is a sad waste of time to send a child to school and not provide suitable books with which to improve the time to advantage.

Last March meeting the town taking no action on the subject, the matter went back to the old system ; that of everyone supplying their own school-books.

However at the earnest solicitation of many scholars throughout the town, that the Reading books should be changed, your committee thought best that this branch might receive the attention its importance demands ; to place in the schools the “Franklin Advanced” and “New Franklin” readers in place of the “Old Franklin” series which has seemed to create an interest, much needed in the reading classes. Children tire of an old story oft repeated.
